MacKerricher State Park Aid Honored in ReserveAmerica's Awards Program

Richard Enoch, California State Park Aid for MacKerricher State Park in Mendocino, was honored in ReserveAmerica's annual "America's Ranger of the Year Awards."

Richard Enoch, California State Park Aid for MacKerricher State Park in Mendocino, CA, joined the California Department of Parks and Recreation in 1970. He relocated to his current Mendocino district in 1983. As an integral force in Park Aid Visitor Services, Mr. Enoch works primarily in the park's entrance station and continually ensures the well-being of his campers and their vacations. He was honored with a silver medal in the ReserveAmerica awards program.

Reserve America, a leader in recreation and campground reservation services, announced "America's Ranger of the Year" award as well as five additional silver medal winners from across the country. The annual awards are given to the country's top rangers who dedicate their careers to serving park visitors while preserving the country's public lands for future generations. Following the tally of votes submitted to ReserveAmerica by camping enthusiasts from all across the country, ReserveAmerica presented the awards.
